Directions:

1. Use the literary terms listed below to compose a rough draft of your own mini-short story:

- setting
- protagonist
- characterization
- conflict

Your story must include the setting (time and place), a protagonist (main character), a description of the main character (characterization), and a conflict (opposing forces). To make your story more interesting, you may choose additional literary terms (ex: antagonist, etc.)

2. Be sure to include an illustration with your final copy. This will be in the form of “flip snack” which are amazing interactive books at <http://www.flipsnack.com/>

3. Once you have polished your story, save it as a word document (don't forget to include a title page with name, date, block, instructor's name, and image) and then convert it into a pdf file by clicking <http://www.freepdfconvert.com/> before uploading it into “flip snack”

Have fun and be creative!
